THE Undersigned call the attention of Merchants and Agents of vessels discharging at this port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their Wharves at New Harbour.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick godowns on the wharves, which vessels have the use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen, are avoided by vessels using the wharves.

Carriage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than Lighterage from the canals, and the same hire discharging alongside is free.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

The Daily Press

HONGKONG, AUGUST 8TH, 1868.

THE proceedings in the Supreme Court on Thursday last were of a nature so very unusual that they can hardly be allowed to pass without comment. We have, of course, no intention of noticing the evidence given by Senhor HORTA, or of commenting thereon, for although, through the courtesy of the CHIEF-JUSTICE, the examination was as public as if the trial of the cooks of HIGINA v. C. A. SAINZ had been going on, it might have been taken in private, and is only a portion of the evidence to be given on either side, and so, incomplete and protected until the whole case has been concluded. One thing we may say that will prejudice neither the defence nor the prosecution, and that is, as we understand it, a de bene esse examination means an examination to be taken hereafter for what it is worth, the examination of Senhor HORTA will not benefit anyone but the lawyers who pocket, we presume, heavy fees for their four hours' amusement on Thursday afternoon.

The disclaimer which the CHIEF-JUSTICE, speaking in the name of the Government, put on record, of all official knowledge by His Excellency of the proceedings against the China Mail and Echo do Povo, demands and admits of more prompt and more serious attention. Addressing himself to the public as well as to the bar, Mr. SHALE, at the request of the GOVERNOR, says that His Excellency has, up to this time, had no official knowledge of the prosecutions instituted in the name of the QUEEN, and by her Attorney-General in this colony, against Mr. SAINZ and Mr. SOUSA for libels on the Government and Government officials of Macao and of Portugal. The Governor ordered or sanctioned these proceedings; he disapproves of them, and disclaims all knowledge of or connection with them. Hitherto so far as public attention has been called to the matter it has been the general opinion, that His Excellency, moved by the representations of the Portuguese Consul here, and of the late GOVERNOR of Macao, had referred the question of the criminality or otherwise of the articles in the China Mail and Echo complained of to the Acting Attorney-General, with directions for him to do what was proper under the circumstances, and that the Attorney-General being of opinion that there was ground for complaint on the part of the Portuguese Government, commenced the proceedings now pending. No one for a moment supposed that in instituting proceedings in the name of the QUEEN for an offence, which is, if it is an offence at all, an offence against international and not municipal law, the Attorney-General was acting proprio motu, and without the authority of the Government, whose legal adviser and law officer he is. That he has acted in the exercise of his own discretion, and not under instructions from any superior is now evident. His Excellency's disclaimer settles that point. The first question then that presents itself is, has the Attorney-General, as such, power, in his discretion, to prosecute whom he pleases, for what crime seems fit to him, and in what mode he pleases, using the name of the QUEEN for the purposes of such prosecution? or, is he simply a ministerial officer, set in motion from without, in some cases by private parties, in others, where the rights and interests of the crown are concerned, by one or other department of the Government? We believe that in theory an Attorney-General has the most absolute discretion to prosecute or not where the rights of the crown are affected, as seems fit to him; that he has power to refuse to file an information when ordered to do so, say by the GOVERNOR, if he does not think it a fit case for a prosecution, and may prefer an indictment, and proceed on it in opposition to the wishes of the Government, if he thinks that there is just grounds for so doing. If his conduct is disapproved of, the remedy is, his removal from office; but so long as he holds office, he is in such matters subordinate to no one, and responsible only to the law. What he does he does at his own risk.

Such is, in theory, the position and powers of our Attorney-General. In practice it would appear that these powers are rarely if ever exercised, and that the principal law officer of the Crown, even in England, very rarely takes proceedings in the name of the QUEEN for an offence against her person or Government, but in obedience to instructions from one or other department of the State. Of course in carrying out these instructions he exercises a discretionary power, and, should a case occur which, in the opinion of an Attorney-General of England, required an exercise of his extraordinary power of proceeding, proprio motu, no man worthy to fill that high position would hesitate to act in the exercise of that absolute discretion which in theory he possesses.

We incline to the opinion that Mr. BALL was not bound, even in this very peculiar case of the QUEEN against SAINZ to consult the wishes or obtain the sanction of Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL, if, in his discretion, he did not deem it requisite or advisable so to do.

But then comes the second question, did Mr. BALL exercise that discretion, which in law he possesses, well and wisely in this case. The general opinion is that he did not, and we concur in that opinion for reasons too numerous to mention here. Any one considering for a moment the charge preferred against Mr. SAINZ, and the mode in which it is preferred, will find ample cause to join in our condemnation of the Attorney-General's conduct in prosecuting this prosecution without consulting with the Government, in whose name he acts.

But if the Attorney-General is deserving of censure, how much more does he deserve reproach, who put upon an officer of the crown, and his own chosen legal adviser, the degrees of the public reprimand administered to Mr. BALL in open court on Thursday last. If His Excellency disapproved of Mr. BALL'S conduct in this matter, there were fifty other ways of letting him know that, every one of them preferable to the mode actually adopted. If there were no other way of doing it, Mr. BALL'S resignation of his acting appointment, or dismissal even, would have been less offensive—less insulting to a public servant of such deservedly high character and acknowledged worth, than the most unprecedented course followed by His Excellency. He had credit for rather more discretion. Perhaps his wishes were exceeded by his agent in administering the reprimand, although we can hardly think so. If not, and if Chief-Justice SHALE simply gave expression to His Excellency's words, and in the mode suggested by His Excellency for that purpose, we can only say that, unwisely as Mr. Attorney has exercised his discretion in the promotion of the prosecutions for libel now pending, Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL exhibited much more unwisely his lack of temper and discretion.

The Circus.

The performances of the Great World Circus this evening will be for the benefit of Senhor HORTA, who is now considered to be the highest in his peculiar branch of the profession. Mr. Fisher is suffering from a painful disease, which has blighted his hopes of continuing much longer in his profession, and prior to his departure with the Circus to America, he takes a benefit, and relies on the public as an old servant, to patronize him on this occasion. We wish Mr. Fisher every success.

The Australian Dramatic Troupe.

Another representation was given by these clever people last night, and to a very full house, who seemed, if applause is a criterion, to enjoy the fun immensely. Although the gambling-house was marked on the programme as the first piece, yet in consideration of many requests the "Young Widow" was introduced instead. The Rough Diamond will admit that those parts between Mr. Holland and Miss Arnot were the most applauded in fact Mr. Holland, as Conrad, was very clever and took the lion's share of applause during the piece. For the second part Mr. A. Milner gave an extremely clever performance in the single trapeze, and Mrs. Airey, sang with her usual sweetness and with the customary success, being encored, as she had been every night we have mentioned before, however, if anything, Miss Arnot was a more lively widow; Mrs. Airey was a more sprightly maid; and Mr. Holland was more confidential in his dialect than on the previous occasion. At the conclusion of the performances it was announced that Thursday next would be for the benefit of Mr. Holland. It will be seen by an advertisement that they play in Macao to-morrow and Monday.

Supreme Court.

BEFORE CHIEF-JUSTICE SHALE.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

In the matter of Dent and Co.'s Bankruptcy, and the London Assurance Corporation.

This was a petition by the London Assurance Company, for a preferential payment under section 95 of the Bankruptcy Ordinance, out of the joint estate of bankrupts of certain moneys received by them as insurance policies, while acting as agents for the above corporation during the months of April and May, 1867, which instead of having been specially set aside for the benefit of the company, had been passed by a clerical error into the general cash account of the bankrupt firm.

It appears according to the allegations in the petition that the bankrupts had been agents for the corporation in Hongkong, and were duly authorised to sign policies &c. That although the firm of Dent and Co. carry on business embarrassed, they still continued to receive premia and grant policies for the corporation, and up to April had remitted such premia to London. In April and May, however, the premiums instead of having been kept separated and apart, were, by a clerical mistake, passed through the general cash account, and accordingly went into the funds of the firm. Subsequently like premia had been received, specially set apart and remitted. That in October, 1867, the bankrupts had written a letter to the corporation stating that by error the money had been put with the general funds, and that pressed by hostile creditors they had been obliged to seek protection in the Bankruptcy Court. That they had from thus pressed they should have felt themselves justified in remitting this money, but that now it was in the hand of the official assignee.

Upon these allegations it was contended that this was a preferential claim under a trust. That Dent and Co. had themselves in their letter admitted the duty imposed upon them, but explained that their inability to carry out this duty had arisen from the acts of hostile creditors. That now the necessary protection from these hostile creditors had been removed by the deed executed, appointing trustees, and that accordingly this duty which Dent & Co. had admitted now passed to the trustees. There could be no hardship in this, for no cash payment, because the money had been paid into the hands of the bankrupts after their insolvency and for a specific purpose, which the assignee was sufficiently protected to support this application. In support of this argument the learned counsel cited Pennell v. Deffell (23 L. J. Chancery 113, and 4 Dellis 372).

The Chief-Justice remarked that he did not see how he could receive a letter dated October 1867, when the bankruptcy took place in April 1867, having any bearing upon this matter. The firm of Dent and Co. had ceased at that time to exist. Again, how could this money be sufficiently ear-marked if it had once passed into the general cash account. It had become mingled with the general funds of the firm, which was very different from its having been put aside separately, and by itself for a specific purpose.

Mr. Pollard, in reply to the argument, after referring to the case of Pennell and Daffell, which he submitted could not in any way be made applicable to this case, went on to contend that this money could not be distinguishable after it had once passed into the general cash account. The contention of the other side was an impossibility under bankruptcy law, and if such a principle as they sought to establish existed, the assets of almost every bankrupt firm would be reduced to a ridiculously small amount. The petition only alleged a breach of duty, and this could not, under any circumstances, give a preferential claim to the assets of the estate.

The Chief-Justice asked Mr. Haylbr whether, if he dismissed this petition without costs, the corporation would come in under the deed and sign. His mind was at present leaning in that direction, although he did not know how it might be affected after a more thorough consideration of the matter. That was, if the petition was dismissed, they would give the trustees no further trouble.

Mr. Haylbr replied that he would like time to consider this point, and consult with his client. He would be prepared to answer next Wednesday, if Sir Lordship would allow the matter to stand till then.

It was accordingly arranged that before judgment is given, the corporation will be prepared to either consent or not to be a Worship's suggestion.

The CUSTOM BAIL (ROBERTS).

The cargo boatman charged in this case, was again brought up before Mr. May for examination, when the evidence having been again taken in extenso, the defendant was fully committed for trial at the next sitting of the criminal sessions of the Supreme Court.

BEFORE E. W. GOODLAKE, Esq.

ATTEMPTING TO BRIBE INSPECTOR ALFORD.

Mr. Francis (from Mr. Gaskell's office) appeared before his Worship to-day, to apply that the prisoner who was convicted for attempting to bribe Inspector Alford, might have his case reheard.

Mr. Goodlake declined to re-hear the case, but he had no objection to state the case if so desired.

Mr. Alford: If I might make a remark, I would observe that I am simply here to object to your Worship rehearing the case.

Mr. Goodlake: Ah! Mr. Alford, we will take your objection for what it is worth. Application refused accordingly.

During the application the court was crowded with a most respectable body of Chinese, who exhibited much interest in the proceedings.

Mr. Hart and the Chamber of Commerce.

The following letter from Mr. Hart has been addressed to the Chairman of the Hongkong Chamber of Commerce. Owing to some misrepresentations made, by interested parties, regarding the time of our going to press with the Overland Trade Report on Thursday evening last, the letter did not reach us until late last evening.

Police Intelligence, 7th August.

BEFORE C. MAY, Esq.

A BAGGE OF UNDESIRABLES.

John Hunn, Alexander Cameron, seamen unemployed, J. H. Pinson, fourth officer of the steamer Rieter, Agusto Busch, clerk, and Shark Hanniur, lascars of the same vessel, were charged by Sergeant Hawes with being destitute, and without means of gaining a proper livelihood.

The sergeant who proposes to the door prisoner worthy answer in turning out disreputable Europeans in the colony) was subpœnaed to say that last night, in walking his rounds in Hongkong, having an especial eye for destitute, he found the defendants sleeping in the new Town Hall, and others in the new Gymnasium. They seemed to have no visible means of subsistence.

First defendant, Munro, made the following defence. He had gone to Singapore in the ship Congress, and then run from her. He then went on the single trapeze, and was discharged at this port. He was perfectly willing to go in any vessel he was shipped in.

Alexander Cameron, the second defendant had a different tale to tell. He had been a boatsman on board the Pauly steamer from Glasgow to Manila, and had been discharged at the latter port, Hoaring he might get employment in the Hongkong he came over here in the Spanish barque Gracious, as a passenger. He was destitute, but willing to work.

J. H. Pinson, 4 m. fourth officer of the steamer Rieter, Matheson and Co.'s steamship Rieter, said I had my passage by going on shore the evening before the steamer sailed, and failed to return by the time of sailing. All my money and clothes are on board the steamer. I have applied to Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co., but have been informed that nothing can be done for me; I must wait until the steamer comes back. I cannot get any employment till the steamer comes back.

Busch, the fourth prisoner, had a most extraordinary tale to relate. He was a resident of Yokohama, and his lived there as a clerk. He came in this colony in the French steamer Duplelx, and on arrival here put up at Yoh Sang's boarding-house. While there he received an invitation to go to Macao, and he went there, putting up at Gardner's Macao Hotel. Here he fell into misfortune, by following the invitation of the proprietor of the Hotel, and visiting the gambling-house, he lost $150, and could not pay Gardner's bill; and therefore was obliged to remain in Macao, having left the clothes he had left behind, to pay his hotel bill. He did not know what was the fair and honest bill against him, but Mr. Gardner made it out $78 for his stay. He was a naturalised citizen of the United States and produced papers to show that.

The fifth prisoner was only an old Indian loafing about, and of course had no real excuse to give.

Mr. May said the first two prisoners, Munro and Cameron would go to prison for 14 days as rogues and vagabonds. Pinson, who said he was fourth officer of the steamer Rieter, would be allowed to go to the office of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co. and see what could be done. The fifth prisoner (Indian) would go to prison for 14 days with hard labour. With regard to Busch, as he was a naturalised citizen of the United States, he would be sent to his Consul.

Later in the day Busch returned, and said that the American Consul would not look at him as a British subject, and would not allow him (Busch) to make any statement.

Mr. May was very sorry, and ordered 82 to be paid from the poor box, for the temporary relief of the naturalised American, who might have been very useful during the late war in the States, but who was not wanted now, and therefore not convenient to be recognized.

The CUSTOM BAIL (ROBERTS).

The cargo boatman charged in this case, was again brought up before Mr. May for examination, when the evidence having been again taken in extenso, the defendant was fully committed for trial at the next sitting of the criminal sessions of the Supreme Court.

BEFORE E. W. GOODLAKE, Esq.

ATTEMPTING TO BRIBE INSPECTOR ALFORD.

Mr. Francis (from Mr. Gaskell's office) appeared before his Worship to-day, to apply that the prisoner who was convicted for attempting to bribe Inspector Alford, might have his case reheard.

Mr. Goodlake declined to re-hear the case, but he had no objection to state the case if so desired.

Mr. Alford: If I might make a remark, I would observe that I am simply here to object to your Worship rehearing the case.

Mr. Goodlake: Ah! Mr. Alford, we will take your objection for what it is worth. Application refused accordingly.

During the application the court was crowded with a most respectable body of Chinese, who exhibited much interest in the proceedings.

Mr. Hart and the Chamber of Commerce.

The following letter from Mr. Hart has been addressed to the Chairman of the Hongkong Chamber of Commerce. Owing to some misrepresentations made, by interested parties, regarding the time of our going to press with the Overland Trade Report on Thursday evening last, the letter did not reach us until late last evening.

INSPECTORATE GENERAL OF CUSTOMS,
PEKING, 20th July, 1868.

SIR,—I beg to invite your attention to the contents of the despatch now addressed to you, and which has reference to matters of common interest

2.—I desire to be permitted to take advantage of the existence of a Mercantile Representative Body, to ascertain, from time to time, the views of the communities at the ports, on all matters affecting their interests in connection with the working of the Customs' Department, and on such subjects as may seem to be of a kind in which the assistance of that department might be calculated to be productive of good result or mutual benefit.

3.—The doings of the past ten years make it evident that there exists an identity and not antagonism of interest, and, in the exceptional state of affairs in China, experience suggests that these identical interests can be best furthered by a mutual good understanding, and by common conference in respect of measures that affect them. That the country should enjoy tranquility, is of as much importance to the mercantile body as to the Government itself; that treaty stipulations should be understood and adhered to, is just as conducive to the welfare of the Government, as to the prosperity of the merchant; that there should be method in the collection of revenue, and regularity in the administration of revenue matters, is just as necessary to the transaction of the merchant's business, as to the proper performance of their duties by Customs' officials; and that there should be a mutual good understanding, contributes just as much to the success of those who have to act, as it does to the protection of those who are acted upon. The discussion of measures affecting the general tranquillity of the empire, and the interpretation of treaty rights and enforcement of treaty stipulations are, of course, matters that concern none but the Chief-Justice and Mr. Haylbr whether, if he dismissed this petition without costs, the corporation would come in under the deed and sign. His mind was at present leaning in that direction, although he did not know how it might be affected after a more thorough consideration of the matter. That was, if the petition was dismissed, they would give the trustees no further trouble.

Mr. Haylbr replied that he would like time to consider this point, and consult with his client. He would be prepared to answer next Wednesday, if Sir Lordship would allow the matter to stand till then.

It was accordingly arranged that before judgment is given, the corporation will be prepared to either consent or not to be a Worship's suggestion.

The CUSTOM BAIL (ROBERTS).

The cargo boatman charged in this case, was again brought up before Mr. May for examination, when the evidence having been again taken in extenso, the defendant was fully committed for trial at the next sitting of the criminal sessions of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Hart and the Chamber of Commerce.

The following letter from Mr. Hart has been addressed to the Chairman of the Hongkong Chamber of Commerce. Owing to some misrepresentations made, by interested parties, regarding the time of our going to press with the Overland Trade Report on Thursday evening last, the letter did not reach us until late last evening.

The Night Side of Paris.

(Pall Mall Gazette.)

After various descriptions of LAMERIQUE.

After having discovered a spot proceeding to the Carrieres de l'Amérique, it became necessary to ascertain whether our driver was willing not only to take us that distance, but likewise to venture into each of the wide-awake and tenebrous locality at such an unreasonable hour of the night. As it happened, our presumed "cocher" had never heard of the Carrieres, and consequently could not be daunted by their evil reputation.

The streets are by this time almost entirely deserted; every now and then we come upon sergents-de-ville walking in pairs; late revellers being conducted home by some "guardian angel;" solitary pedestrians walking for security in the middle of the road; and the lights of the chiffonniers dancing before us like the lights of ships at sea. We cross the Boulevards and find them equally deserted, save that a solitary carriage containing some grande dame in tulle and diamonds, stealing a few momentary winks of sleep, flashes past. We go over the Canal St. Martin, up the Rue Faubourg du Temple, across the Boulevard de l'Esterieur, and proceed to ascend the steep incline of La Courtille. So far we feel satisfied that we are in the right road; but when we reach the Carrières, as we know we shall have to do, we are in doubt. At this moment we overtake a couple of sergents-de-ville, and order the driver to pull up and make inquiries. "Carrières de l'Amérique?" they repeat to one another, and stare at us; but, with the impertinence of French policemen, they ask no questions, and after having directed us, make some unintelligible observations to each other about "deux fous Anglais" as we disappear.

We stop and ask the next night, bidding the coachman await our return. He grumbles, but we take no notice of that, and so he composes himself for a nap as we advance up the dark lane. We also take care to keep to the middle of the road to guard against any too sudden interview, which might otherwise be easily made from behind the broken bits of wall, the lurking masses of earth, and the ruins of irregular fences on either side. At last in the dim light we catch sight of some empty waggons drawn up on one side of the road, and see before us the light of a blazing fire. We are sure now that we are on the right road. As we advance, the ground on either hand becomes more hilly and desolate-looking. Rising higher and higher, and until at last we find ourselves encompassed by a series of steep mounds with clusters of bushes and stunted trees cutting here and there against the heavy grey sky.

On our left hand we notice a long winding flight of rude steps, hewn out of the soft stone, leading upwards to the top of the hills, the fires from which we had already remarked; after a moment's hesitation we decide upon ascending them. On reaching the summit of the mound we find ourselves on the brink of a large desolate track of broken ground, with several large open sheds at some distance in front of us, but considerably towards our left. Whilst we are debating as to the course we shall adopt, we make out amidst a small patch of sky the outlines of some figures moving about beneath the sheds. For our future guidance we observe that a distinct visible to those people as there is a broad mass of sky behind us. Presently we observe three men issuing from out the darkness near to us, and more specially, between one hill in the direction of the road by which we had entered the quarries, while the third advances slowly over the broken ground in the intervening space between ourselves and him. As he approaches the branches off in a sudden in a like direction to that taken by his companions. This gives us some concern. It looks as though we were surrounded. There are three we advance at once towards the last mentioned individual, who still continues in sight. As soon as we get within earshot he halts. "Are there many at the quarries to-night?" "Not so many as usual," replies he. We ask how many. "Why," he replies, "there are nine of them now at the plaster time, and six or seven at the cement kilns, I fancy." "Are they asleep?" "Some are, the two women and the children; and several of the men, but a couple of men are having a game at cards." "Is there anybody in the stone quarries?" we next inquired. "No," is replied, "they are all empty since the police chase on." This reply indicates that he took us for visitors of the place; but on asking our new acquaintance what he is, he coolly tells us he is a beggar, and that he has been a wreck on his own account. "Who were those men who came from the sheds with you a few minutes ago?" we inquired. "A couple of tramps who have come out to the Halles to see if they can get a job." "You know your way, of course, all about this place?" "Yes." "Not at all," he replied showing us all moved forward, he leading the way.

We followed him into the first shed. True enough, lying on the bare ground round the top of the still burning kiln we counted four men, all ragged and shoeless, a couple of pale faced, scantily-clad women, and a chubby looking little girl, the whole of them seemingly fast asleep, while up in a corner, sheltered behind a pile of bricks, we observed two ill-looking, bare-footed blackguards, playing piquet with a pack of dirty cards. At the sight of a third visitor they both struck in the ground, while a third was looking on. All were smoking short black pipes, and all seemed to be in an advanced state of intoxication. They exchanged a few words with our guide, but took no notice of me or my friend beyond eyeing us with a confused expression of astonishment. The one had picked up one end to be between long piles of newly made bricks stacked to dry, then along a narrow winding pathway, over the same kind of broken ground we had already traversed, until we reached the top of the cement kilns, three of which, within a short distance of each other, are burning furiously. We find the heat too fierce, and we are forced by far too many to continue in close vicinity to them for any length of time; and we notice that the dirty, ragged, sun-looking wretches who are sleeping near them have a sleep at a safe distance. "Many a man has been suffocated by going to sleep too close to them," observes our guide. "I once saw a fellow carried off in the Belgian fours here. He was drunk and cold when he came in that he would lie down near the edge, though every one cautioned him of the danger he was exposing himself to. By-and-by we all dropped off to sleep, and he with the rest of us; and when we began to turn out in the morning before the workmen arrived, we found the poor devil had been his taste for liquor." Sad indeed was his pipe in this, and required to be dressed in clean clothes, signifying that he was dead and ready for his coffin.

Among the miserable-looking beings we have found asleep was one little fellow with an uncordion for his pillow, not because it added to the comfort of his repose, but that he might not be twice stolen from him when he awoke. Another individual had a worn-out pair of shoes under his head, evidently for the same reason; although we certainly should not have supposed them to be worth stealing. Our guide told us that those who brought any food with them to the quarries invariably eat it up to the last scrap before they went to sleep, as they knew new-comers would be robbed as they slept. Whilst we were thus conversing, we had been descending the steps. For our own future guidance we observe there was a distinct visible to those people, as there is a broad mass of sky behind us. Presently we observe three men issuing from out the darkness near to us, and more specially, between one hill in the direction of the road by which we had entered the quarries, while the third advances slowly over the broken ground in the intervening space between ourselves and him. are numerous short branches. It then makes a deep descent and extends for a considerable distance further. When the police come, as they periodically do at night-time, in a body some forty or fifty strong, and after planting a cordon round the quarries, make a seizure of everybody whom they can catch within its circuit, the more experienced ladbirds, our guide informed us, invariably make for this tunnel, and secrete themselves in one or other of its many galleries until all danger of arrest has passed away. It was only on rare occasions, he said, that the police ventured to explore these subterranean passages, as a considerable number of men, provided with lighted torches was requisite for this duty moreover, they never thought it worth while to leave guard to watch the entrance, as the chances were the monkey wished to capture would cut out with some of the regular workmen, and so escape.

Wolmer returned; to the man in charge of the kiln fires, and entered into conversation with him. He informed us that the people who frequented the quarries usually left by four o'clock in the morning or earlier; at any rate, when the workmen arrived at five o'clock they invariably found the place perfectly clear.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hongkong, Friday Evening.

A fair inquiry has existed for Bengal Drug from Chinese quarters; and Patna has been placed at $617½ cash, and $630 on credit. Should this demand continue, and traders show firmness, prices are likely to be maintained if not advanced. Some little business has been done in Benares at $617½ to $63½; Malwa appears to be nominal for the present. The Ottawa brings about 388 chests drug and about 1,200 bales Cotton. The Mail Steamer is likely to have between 900 to 1,000 chests Malwa. The last Bombay price was about Rupees 1,490 per chest of 140 lbs.

There have been a few sales of piece goods within the last two days, but beyond this there is nothing new to report with regard to the condition of the market. The encouraging advices from Shanghai have sent a considerable quantity of goods there and to Tientsin, making a market, which in the way of refusing stocks here must better and strengthen the position of holders when any business shall make its appearance. The only buyers are foreigners for re-shipment, but their limited inquiry does not seem to have affected prices much. For the best chop Silk Grey Shirtings $2.95 is the outside quotation, and it is very doubtful whether even this could be obtained. Sales reported are 550 pieces Turkey Red at $3.00, 1,500 pieces 7lbs. T-Cloths at $2.97½ to $2.80, and 1,800 pieces 9lbs at 2.77½. Raw Cotton continues to be taken in dribbling lots at rather irregular prices. About 800 bales Bengal Staple have been placed to-day at $15 to $16.25, and 50 bales Bombay at $16.00. There is some little excitement in the share market for old Bank, but there are no sellers, 27 premium has been refused for a small parcel. There is nothing doing in new, and these do not seem to attract any notice.

FORTY YEARS' USE as PUBLIC MEDICINE

(Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicines)

By the public have proved their efficacy and virtues, and the truth of Mr. Morison's system as to the cure of diseases. Being composed only of vegetable matter or medicinal herbs, they are known to the most tender age or weakest frame, under every stage of suffering; the most pleasant in their properties and the most certain in searching out the seat of any complaint. Besides cleansing the great highway of the body—the bowels—they act especially on the kidneys, the liver, and the skin. A sense of relief in the wools system is felt very shortly after they have been taken—the blood flows more evenly, the heart beats more regularly, and deep is given to those long & proved of it. The most sinces consist of three sorts, viz: No. 1 Morison's Pills. In boxes containing 60 Pills at 7s6, 3s. 1½, 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.; family packets, 10s. each; also the Vegetable Aperient Powders, 1s. 1½d. per box.
